

Bullying

A Whole-School Approach

This bestselling practical resource is perfect for classroom teachers, guidance officers, school counsellors and curriculum coordinators. Authors Amelia Suckling and Carla Temple have found that bullying in the school environment can only be dealt with effectively if the whole school is behind the endeavour, and that trying to handle it in isolation does not work in the long term.

Their program unites teachers, children and parents in a common language and has proven to be an inspiring, practical and fun way for children to better understand their own behaviour as well as the behaviour of others. This text combines research, tools and classroom experience to provide a framework for creating a healthier and happier school community.

Part One: Building a Whole-school Approach outlines how to develop a whole-school approach to bullying. It explores ways in which teachers can collaborate to formulate policy and practice to build and maintain a safe learning environment for the whole school community. It also includes practical intervention and prevention strategies, and guidelines for developing and implementing an anti-bullying policy.

Part Two: Is specifically geared for students, containing 15 lesson plans, with a wide range of photocopiable masters to support the material presented.
